

Makers by Design visits Maury County Schools

Columbia, TN- April 16th, 2015

On Thursday afternoon, TTU Motorsports engaged in another of their Makers by Design programs for high school students. This program involves their team as well as the Tennessee Tech University College of Engineering Student Ambassadors presenting to high school STEM programs on the importance of STEM education. They give the students a presentation that displays how each of the fields relates to the kit car in order to provide a good visual representation of their applications. In addition, the students receive brochures about how to get involved in post-secondary outreach programs.

In this particular program, over 80 students were reached from Maury County Schools at Spring Hill High School. Pictured right is TTU Motorsports Executive Director, Aaron Crowley, talking to students about the car's ignition. The team plans to engage in many more of these visits, including a visit to Central Magnet School in Murfreesboro, TN, on April 24.
